One Reel

MR. Solomon W. Hardesty, age seventy-seven, who lost one eye in the Civil War and became totally blind five years later has become an expert poultryman, as the people of San Gabriel, Cal., will testify. We are then allowed a few merry little glimpses of how Japanese motion picture actors "pull off" their big fight scenes. Next we see the evolution of the skull from the time, when the Osteolepis, a primitive fish had its being, eighteen million years ago, all the way down to the present thought tank of man, capable of thinking up new ways to beat the H. C. of L. Our chemist this week experiments in what scientists call "suspended animation" by dipping a live gold fish into liquid air. It apparently is dead, yet it is quickly restored to
